The faculty of the University of Virginia has just awarded the scholarships for public-school graduates to Mr. W. B. Stone, of Roanoke, and Mr. A. M. Dobie, of Norfolk. These scholarships entitle the holders to $200.00 per year and free tuition in the academic department of the University for three years. By enactment of the visitors six scholarships were set aside for the graduates of the Virginia public-schools, two to be filled each year. The examina tions are competitive and are sent by the professors of English, Latin and Mathematics through the school Superintendent of the County or City in which the candidate for the scholarship resides.

It is a bad sign to hear a person always praistheir own honesty, accuracy or competency. These virtues tell their own tale and do not have to be emblazened about or trumpeted from the house tops. It is an old and truthful maxim that self praise is half scandal. We would rather show our competency and accuracy than tell you of it, and will bear the decision of an honest public as to whether our goods are pure and service competent and accurate in all of its branches. We are willing to stand up before the good people of Tazewell who we have been serving for the past four years and let them decide in regard to our merits. Talk is deceptive but facts are stubborn things and cannot be denied. So do not be deceived but come right along to the old reliable Tazewell Drug Co. and get your prescriptions compounded by G. H. RAW PEANUT EATING HABIT. Why Bath, N. Y., Sells More Unroasted Peanuts Than Other Places

"The village of Bath," said a whole-sale dealer in nuts, "sells more raw or sale of raw peanuts is quite the feature of the peanut trade in Bath, because son for it is that the state soldiers' home is located there. That is why Bath's peanut trade is unique in the quantity of raw peanuts it handles. "No one likes raw peanuts until he acquires the habit, and then he wants them just as regularly as he wants his tobacco. Before the civil war the peanut was chiefly a holiday luxury to the

On those memorable occasions the nut was shucked and masticated until every bucolic jaw was lame. It was only in the towns and large villages that the favored few could have peanuts with them always. Before the war there wasn't a peanut roaster in the whole country outside the big towns, and the rural dealers bought their stock of peanuts already roasted. They were delivered in big, coarse bags To-day every crossroads, from Maine to California, has its peanut stand, and its wheezing steam roaster, and the great American nut has no better or more exclusive standing on circus day or the Fourth of July than it has on any or dinary day of the year, although there is a greater concentration and application of energy in its shucking and chewing on those red-letter days. "A large proportion of the soldiers who went south with the union army were from the rural districts. So, when they got among the peanut patches of Virginia, North Carolina and Tennes see they were, metaphorically speaking, right in clover. At first they roasted at their camp fires the peanuts they pulled from the patches, but it wasn't long before they not only learned to like them raw, but actually preferred them that way. The result was that the boys discovered after awhile that they hankered after peanuts almost as much as they did after tobacco, and they brought the longing back home with them after the war was over. What has been the consequence? The demand for peanuts increased so rapidly with the return of peace that the crop then grown did not begin to supply it. Wideawake farmers in Virginia, North Carolina and Tenneszee saw the point, and their patches of peanut vines, which had been not much more than an incidental adjunct to the farm, expanded into broad fields, and improved cultivation and new methods in caring for and disposing of the crop took the place of the old-time carelessness and crudities. The peanut crop of these three states amounts to more than 4,000,000 bushels annually-a result due entirely to the civil war and the contracting of the peanut habit of the soldiers. The bulk of this crop is handled, prepared and shipped from Norfolk, the value of it being not less than $8,000,000 a year.

"Naturally, the returned soldier's loud call for peanuts soon brought nightly with shucks of peanuts, hot from a revolving roaster, thicker than it ever was on any Fourth of July of
